PARISH LIFE

Original Unity of Man and Woman

We find ourselves almost at the heart of the anthropological (i.e., study of humans) reality that has the name: "body." The words of Genesis 2:23 speak of it directly and for the first time in the following terms: "bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh." The man uttered these words, as if it was only at the sight of the woman that he was able to identify and call by name what makes them visibly similar to each other, and at the same time what manifests humanity.

In the light of the preceding analysis of all the "bodies" which man has come in contact with and which he has defined, conceptually giving them their name (animilia), the expression "flesh of my flesh" takes on precisely this meaning: the body reveals man. This concise formula already contains everything that human science could ever say about the structure of the body as a human organism, about its vitality, and its particular sexual physiology, etc. This first expression of the man, "flesh of my flesh," also contains a reference to what makes the body truly human. Therefore, it referred to what determines man as a person, that is, as a being, who, in all his corporality, is similar to God.

We find ourselves, therefore, almost at the very core of the anthropological reality, the name of which is "body," the human body. However, as can easily be seen, this core is not only anthropological, but also essentially theological. Right from the beginning, the theology of the body is bound up with the creation of man in the image of God. It becomes, in a way, also the theology of sex, or rather the theology of masculinity and femininity, which has its starting point here in Genesis.

St. John Paul II – Theology of the Body

SIXTH SUNDAY OF EASTER

PARISH LIFE

The Forever Young Club will meet Tuesday night, May 8th, 6:00 p.m. at Tony York's in Glendale. Meal choices are country ham, fried chicken breast, and meatloaf. All who attended our last meeting made their choices. If you are not called by Julia or Charlie by May 3rd, you must call them and reserve your spot and meal. The club will pay for your meal but we must pay for all who make reservations. Highlight of meeting will be an appearance by this year's historical society walking tour. The actors will be in full dress and will whet our appetite with their recitations and history of the tour. Please join us for this special night and remember that it would be nice of us to tip the staff (recommended: $1.50-$2.00 per person). It would also be nice if several of you brought door prizes— no other participation needed at Tony York's. Thanks in advance—
Charlie 270-300-0604.
